New course announcement:
GRD 791: KNOWLEDGE MOBILIZATION STUDIO

Knowledge Mobilization Studio is a three-credit course that will provide graduate students and postdoctoral fellows the opportunity to learn and use a knowledge mobilization (KM) framework using their own scholarship and/or content from their disciplines. KM captures the set of concepts and practices that optimize access to and use of knowledge and creative work. The course will enable students and post doc fellows to hone KM transferable skills, allowing them to sharpen core competencies desired within academia, industry, and non-profit organizations.

Students and fellows will select specialized knowledge they have produced and/or content from their own discipline to design a product that will make such knowledge accessible and usable to broader audiences (e.g., blogs, op-eds, videos, performances, TEDtalk-style presentations, infographics). For this purpose, students will use KM constructs and a design template as well as other resources (e.g., faculty and tools from disciplines such as journalism, film, theater, geography, and English, as well as peer groups from Preparing Future Faculty [PFF] and Preparing Future Scholars [PFS] cohorts) to craft a KM project based on their own work. Guest lectures and in-the-field activities will challenge students to experiment, innovate, and design with concepts and practices that optimize access and use of knowledge within the academy and beyond.

Spring 2017
Alternating Fridays, 12:55 - 2:50 pm
Durham Language and Literature (LL) Building, Room 148.

Register now!
Course ID: 105887
Class #27831
More info: GradInfo@asu.edu